

Following is an excerpt from an article which appeared in the April 29, 2020 edition of the Star Tribune which addresses things that could be donated to historical societies.

Don't toss that old bike toy

“The local historical society might want some of your family pictures and letters from soldiers in past wars. Some old magazines, comic books, souvenirs and clothes, even a uniform from a famous fast-food restaurant that a family member worked for, or an early gym suit with bloomers would be welcome for display.”
